Inspector General for Child Welfare, Jennifer Carter updated the Committee and Coalition on the recent YRTC report to the legislature of the investigation of events leading up to the August 2019 events at YRTC Geneva. She shared background information regarding the youth at YRTC with personally identifiable information removed, findings, and recommendations. Carter expressed pleasure that DHHS has accepted five of six recommendations. She noted that DHHS rejected the recommendation for licensing the YRTC as a Residential Childcare Agency with the Division of Public Health in favor of pursuing more appropriate licensing. She added that DHHS had conducted an OHA investigation, noting that the rooms were unsafe for the youth, and had the facility been licensed it may have caught the unsafe conditions during licensing review. Carter answered questions regarding discussion with labor unions, and the status of past recommendations regarding trauma informed care and other past recommendations. She also answered questions regarding Racial and Ethnic Disparities. She noted that no specific analysis done in this regard, but it has been looked at.

A'Jamal Byndon gave a brief update regarding Title II funds in Douglass County. He noted that with the new federal administration there will be a renewed focus on Racial and Ethnic Disparities. He added that the key to engagement and community outreach is transparency and data. Douglass County will focus grant money to strengthen community providers and less on administration.

Monica Miles-Steffens updated the groups regarding Lancaster County's participation in Title II. The goal with the grant is to develop a statewide strategic plan to bring the state back into compliance with the Title II program. Miles-Steffens noted that she has stepped away from Probation to accept a position with the University of Nebraska – Juvenile Justice Institute. She added that the new federal administration brings a new welcomed focus on juvenile justice and she looks forward to collaborating with members of the Committee and Coalition. She noted that diversion has begun to make a difference in youth coming into care. Rumbaugh also shared information regarding Probation's use of the newly created emergency foster care as an alternative to juvenile detention. She also shared information regarding a mentoring program for youth in the community as a detention alternative. Rumbaugh continued by noting a drop in placements from September 2019 to September 2020 much due in part to COVID-19, as facilities and foster homes were unable to accept placements. She also noted a slowdown in the processing of youth during the same time period, and added that Probation expects to see an uptick in this metric but hopes that it remains low moving forward.

Rumbaugh answered questions regarding tracking data by racial and ethnicity. She noted disproportionality in the data. Rumbaugh also answered questions regarding probation violations due to truancy issues. She offered to answered any feedback regarding specific instances of lack of action taken by probation staff, and further training opportunities for staff and educators. Rumbaugh continued to answer questions regarding detention screening validation. She noted that the Annie E. Casey foundation helped Probation take best-practice approaches and merge it into the screening tool, based on whether the items that are screened are correctly recommending detention or community release. She continued by noting that the screening tool had not been validated previously, although it had been evaluated. She also noted that the tool should be scoring the same based on gender, race, ethnicity, etc. Dr. Richard Wiener added that there are very specific data points to study. He continued that the tool must be predictive of youth from different backgrounds.

Kelli Schadwinkel added that there has been a big increase in the availability of MST services across the state since 2013.

Carter offered thoughts regarding planning discussions about the YRTC. Additionally there is one Executive Assistant who pulls intakes. Carter noted that at times she feels like there are times she feels there is a need for additional help, although currently she shared that she feels like she is fully staffed.

She noted that on one had the OIG is a hindsight organization, investigating what has already taken place, while at the same time investigating situations that are currently unfolding.
