7. JSC Workgroup Updates

a. Needs Assessment

Julie Smith shared an update regarding the recent work of the workgroup. She noted the workgroup has been working on surveys to identify gaps in the system around access to residential and higher level treatment services and to refine the surveys to be meaningful in identifying the target populations. Patrick Connell noted that this group is keenly aware and focused on juvenile justice mental health needs, but there is a world outside of that, such as schools, physicians, psychiatrists, hospitals, etc. Connell noted that the Boystown Residential Treatment Center has 82 youth on the waiting list, and that it could be upwards of 120 days before some of those kids enter the program. Connell answered questions regarding out of state youth at Boystown and the groups targeted to receive the surveys. Laura Opfer shared a PowerPoint with information on the structure and goals of the workgroups.

Kari Rumbaugh shared information regarding the recently completed probation district needs analysis, available on the Supreme Court website.

b. Racial & Ethnic Disparities

A'Jamal Byndon shared an update of the work of the workgroup. He shared a graphic of the juvenile justice system from Douglas County. Byndon noted the recent conversation with Voices for Children that would allow the systems map being developed to be interactive across jurisdictions. He noted the continued need for racial and ethnic data from various sources, and continued that without that data change is difficult. Byndon shared that advocacy about this issue is key and that data from law enforcement cannot be overlooked. With data from all sources, he shared that a bigger discussion on racial and ethnic disparities can occur. Laura Opfer shared a PowerPoint with information on the structure and goals of the workgroups. She added that data is missing at many points. She shared a little information about the goal in creating an interactive map.

Kari Rumbaugh shared a thought that coming together and brainstorming with help from System of Care could help make progress in an integrated child welfare juvenile justice data system.

c. Youth Rehabilitation and Treatment Centers

Rico Zavala shared an update of the work of the workgroup. Rico commended Mark LaBouchardiere and thanked his staff for being a tremendous partner in the project. He noted that LaBouchardiere has been very open to any discussion relating to the YRTC system. Rico noted that the workgroup analyzed the YRTC 5-year plan and used it as a starting point for discussion. He shared the three goals of the workgroup include family engagement, accreditation, and the 5-year plan. Rico noted that the workgroup is searching for any help regarding to accreditation. He continued that it is a goal that is difficult to change. Mark LaBouchardiere added information regarding to the work of DHHS on addressing some of the issues.

Members discussed youth stipends as a means to engage youth.

9. Update regarding Title II Funds

Monica Miles-Steffens reminded the groups that Lancaster County in partnership with the NCJJ applied for a non-participating state grant, so that Lancaster County could access dollars to address the four core requirements of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. Lancaster County, in collaboration with the Juvenile Justice Institute, will explore whether Nebraska has the capacity and potentially come back into compliance with the act. Miles-Steffens noted that this is a three-year grant that kicked off in March. She continued by discussing the specifics of the conversations revolving around coming back into compliance. She noted that the group is waiting from guidance from OJJDP regarding whether Nebraska would be held accountable from leaving compliance or whether they would start from scratch. Miles-Steffens specified that the components required to be analyzed are arrest, probation, youth in adult court, and diversion. Elaine Menzel noted that the group is open to JSC members as well. Menzel reiterated that the NCJJ continues to look for young adult members.

10. NCJJ Subcommittee Updates

a. Executive Subcommittee

Elaine Menzel reminded the groups that the Subcommittee did a survey to know all slots and positions are filled, both federally and at the state level. She updated the groups that there are two new members on the Coalition: Misty Frazier and Tammy Steensma. Menzel shared training opportunities available in the near future.

b. Community Planning Advisory Subcommittee

Elaine Menzel shared that the Subcommittee updated the mission, community plans and process the subcommittee went through for accepting or reviewing plans. Trent Chestnutt noted that there are 31 plans submitted through participating counties and the are uploaded to the website.

c. Diversion Subcommittee

Denis Kracl noted that although the Subcommittee hasn't officially met, there has been a lot of work happening. She shared that the Nebraska Crime Commission held a statewide diversion meeting during Nebraska Juvenile Justice Association in Kearney, allowing diversion programs from across the state to meet in person. She continued by noting the Brain Injury Alliance held two webinars aimed at diversion programs to help members understand that there is a traumatic brain injury screening tool and help members help youth who have experienced a TBI. Members discussed the TBI screening tool and related issues. Additionally, Kracl shared that Dr. Zachary Hamilton is wrapping up a final model for a special risk needs screening tool that would be available for use across the state, rather than the individual tools currently being used in different areas.

d. Grant Review Subcommittee

Kari Rumbaugh noted that the grant work the Subcommittee worked on is included in the annual report. She shared the specifics of the grant process approval process. She highlighted there was around $6 million awarded and due to LB380 a reduction was needed. The Subcommittee worked to adjust based on organizations that historically return funds. Trent Chestnut added that the group added seven new counties this year, but he hopes to bring in tribal representations.

e. Young Adult Subcommittee

Elaine Menzel noted that Bobbi Taylor is not present to report out but highlighted previously in the meeting some of the work and conference attendance of young adults representing the NCJJ. Menzel again noted the need for young adult representation, as Mark LaBouchardiere pointed out much responsibility is often put into only a few young adults, leaving gaps when they leave.

11. YRTC Update

Mark LaBouchardiere noted that the population of the YRTCs has been decreasing over the last five years. He reminded the groups that visitation is up and running again, and that video conferencing continues. YRTCs are engaging in community activities again as well. LaBouchardiere noted the hiring struggles in Kearney and a program with youth jobs within the community. He has reached out to the community colleges in the area as a partnership for hiring college students, and he noted other activities done to find leads on employees.

Judge Daniels noted some of the previous discussions regarding the state of the YRTCs and commended the work of the current administration on doing something about the conditions. He continued that when a facility looks nice it can make a big difference to begin to build a foundation for rehabilitation.

Members discussed touring the facility and issues related to touring.

12. Probation Update.

Kari Rumbaugh shared the Juvenile Services Division detailed analysis. She provided an overview of the report noting the newly added probation officer spotlights. She noted that addition is important in talking about what officers are doing and the impact they are making. Rumbaugh also noted the tangible incentive work being done in partnership with the Sherwood Foundation. She added information about the “driver,” a new worksheet introduced last year that staff facilitate with probationers to determine the driving domain that is impacting them. Rumbaugh continued by providing additional detail regarding the report.
